Stradivarius
1680 Violin
“Paganini”

This violin was one of the Antonio Stradivari (1644-1737) instruments possessed by the celebrated violin virtuoso Niccolò Paganini (1782-1840) and together with a violin of 1727, a viola of 1731, and a cello of 1736, formed the quartet. After Paganini, the instruments were separated until Emil Herrmann, a renowned dealer in New York, brought them back together in 1940s and sold them to Mrs. Anna E. Clark. She then donated this quartet to the Corcoran Gallery of Arts in Washington D.C., from which the Nippon Music Foundation acquired the set in 1994.

“Paganini”*

The history of this violin dates back to Count Cozio di Salabue. In 1817, Niccolò Paganini (1782-1840) obtained this violin, and from his son Baron Achille, Parisian dealer Jean-Baptiste Vuillaume acquired it. In around 1893, the violin was bought by Ernest Nicolini, a tenor and amateur violinist, who was the husband of famous soprano Adelina Patti (1843-1919). In 1914 W. E. Hill & Sons sold the violin to renowned collector Mr. Felix Kahn of New York. After passing ownership by W. R. Ford & Co. in 1927, the violin was purchased by Emil Herrmann.

1736 Violin
“Muntz”

The label attached to this instrument bears an Italian inscription, "d'anni 92 (92 years old)", handwritten by Stradivari himself. It has a first class reputation for its excellent condition and tonal quality. This violin takes its name from a famous collector and amateur violinist, H. M. Muntz of Birmingham, England, who owned it since 1872. This is one of the last instruments made by Stradivari, who passed away in 1737.

Stradivarius
1736 Cello
“Paganini”

In 1840, this cello was sold from Parisian dealer Jean-Baptiste Vuillaume to a German amateur named Mr. Lemire. In about 1876, an art dealer in Frankfurt named Kaiser acquired it and passed it on to the collector Mr. C. G. Meier of London. In 1877, he sold it to Mr. Ernest Ladenburg, councillor of Frankfurt, who in turn sold it to Mr. Robert von Mendelssohn in 1895, after which it remained in the possession of the Mendelssohn family until renowned dealer Emil Herrmann obtained this cello.
